A poor widow also came and put in two small coins worth a few cents. Calling his disciples to himself, he said to them, "Amen, I say to you, this poor widow put in more than all the other contributors to the treasury."

THE SEVEN THEMES OF CATHOLIC SOCIAL TEACHING

Recently, I listened to an interview with Bishop Robert Barron who was talking about how there is no political party or affiliation that neatly fits our Catholic social teaching. The Church's social teaching is a rich treasure of wisdom about building a just society and living lives of holiness amidst the challenges of modern society and should be our guide in voting and participating in the political process. Modern Catholic social teaching has been articulated through a tradition of papal, conciliar, and episcopal documents. Bishop Barron was commenting about how it is good, in one sense, that no political party does fit our Catholic view because then we are placing our hope squarely on Jesus Christ in this pilgrim way on earth. On the other hand, it is rather exasperating because we continue to struggle to accomplish legislative victories in establishing laws that reflect such justice according to our Catholic understanding.

For example, we uphold the need to welcome the foreigner and the stranger among us, which is seen in our country as leaning to the left, politically. But we also uphold the freedom to follow one's individual religious convictions, which is something that is viewed as leaning to the right, politically. Other examples are that we emphatically reject abortion while also upholding the right to life of even the worst criminals, rejecting capital punishment.

So, what is our Catholic social teaching? I have included inserts about its principles in previous bulletins such as the Dignity of the Human Person, forming one's conscience, the role of the Church in political life, the common good, solidarity, and subsidiarity. At the same time, there are seven prominent themes of Catholic social teaching and, with excerpts taken from the USCCB's website under Beliefs and Teachings, I summarize them. There are seven major themes:

Life and Dignity of the Human Person

The Catholic Church proclaims that human life is sacred and that the dignity of the human person is the foundation of a moral vision for society. This belief is the foundation of all the principles of our social teaching. In our society, human life is under direct attack from abortion, euthanasia, and more recently threatened by cloning and practices like embryonic stem cell research. We believe that every person is precious, that people are more important than things, and that the measure of every institution is whether it threatens or enhances the life and dignity of the human person.

Call to Family, Community, and Participation

The person is not only sacred but also social. How we organize our society -- in economics and politics, in law and policy -- directly affects human dignity and the capacity of individuals to grow in community. Marriage and the family are the central social institutions that must be supported and strengthened, not undermined. We believe people have a right and a duty to participate in society, seeking together the common good and well-being of all, especially the poor and vulnerable.

Rights and Responsibilities

The Catholic tradition teaches that human dignity can be protected and a healthy community can be achieved only if human rights are protected and responsibilities are met. Therefore, every person has a fundamental right to life and a right to those things required for human decency. Corresponding to these rights are duties and responsibilities--to one another, to our families, and to the larger society.

Option for the Poor and Vulnerable

A basic moral test is how our most vulnerable members are faring. In a society marred by deepening divisions between rich and poor, our tradition recalls the story of the Last Judgment (Mt 25:31-46) and instructs us to put the needs of the poor and vulnerable first.

The Dignity of Work and the Rights of Workers

The economy must serve people, not the other way around. Work is more than a way to make a living; it is a form of continuing participation in God's creation. If the dignity of work is to be protected, then the basic rights of workers must be respected--the right to productive work, to decent and fair wages, to the organization and joining of unions, to private property, and to economic initiative.

Solidarity

We are one human family whatever our national, racial, ethnic, economic, and ideological differences. We are our brothers and sisters keepers, wherever they may be. Loving our neighbor has global dimensions in a shrinking world. At the core of the virtue of solidarity is the pursuit of justice and peace. Pope Paul VI taught that if you want peace, work for justice. The Gospel calls us to be peacemakers. Our love for all our sisters and brothers demands that we promote peace in a world surrounded by violence and conflict.

Care for God's Creation

We show our respect for the Creator by our stewardship of creation. Care for the earth is not just an Earth Day slogan, it is a requirement of our faith. We are called to protect people and the planet, living our faith in relationship with all of God's creation. This environmental challenge has fundamental moral and ethical dimensions that cannot be ignored.

This summary should only be a starting point for those interested in Catholic social teaching. A full understanding can only be achieved by reading the papal, conciliar, and episcopal documents that make up this rich tradition. Go to <https://www.usccb.org/resources/seven-themes-catholic-social-teaching> for references and links to these documents. May God bless America as we promote the gospel of Jesus in the public square in our country.
